Contrary to OSU's sworn affidavit claiming that Petitioner had a 32.036% course grade, the official university learning portal (Carmen) displayed a 53.39% score at the time. This number reflects only the graded components completed prior to the final exam — which itself accounts for 40% of the total course grade.

Petitioner had not yet taken the final exam due to documented medical and psychological disability, and had repeatedly requested a reasonable alternative method of completion in accordance with her SLDS-approved accommodation plan.

The discrepancy between the reported 32% and the actual 53.39% is not merely a technical difference — it reflects a pattern of selective, misleading reporting intended to discredit Petitioner's academic ability, while concealing the University's failure to provide a viable completion pathway.

Petitioner did not ask to pass. She asked for a fair opportunity to complete the course under standard grading expectations. If she were to fail under an accessible format, she would have accepted that outcome.
But she was never given the chance.

This is not an academic failure. It is a procedural denial.
